

A Song for Deepstill

Music and Lyrics by Robert Brown

Orchestrated and Performed by Robert Brown and Grant Dicks

The world has grown so silent,
I miss the sounds of birds and music.

I miss the smile on your face,
All I see is hurt and rejection,
Despair and surrender.

You say you have no part in me,
But I'm still here, I won't leave.
You say you have no love for me,
But I don't care, I'll still hold on to you.

And now the battle rages,
And both our souls are on the line.
Turning back has never looked so easy,
And all I feel is hurt and rejection,
Despair and surrender.

I don't want to lose you.
I don't want to lose me.
